Conservation For Victory

News items appearing recently in the daily press appear to indicate that there was justification for the action of the federal government in devising measures for exercising some degree of supervision over the oil industry of the Dominion after the war broke out.

The importance of oil in the war economy can scarcely be over-emphasized. It must have occurred by this time to everybody that oil is the life-blood of the type of warfare which is being waged by belligerents on both sides. The availability of oil for fuel to drive aeroplanes and tanks and propel submarines and warships may well be the ultimate factor that will decide the outcome of the war.

There is no gaining saying the fact that the urgent need of oil is ever present in the minds of the enemy and that this necessity is largely behind the moves that Hitler is making on the European continent. It is true that the Germans know how to make synthetic liquid fuel and that they are doing so to an increasing degree because, at present at least, they are unable to secure nearly enough in the cheaper and more readily handled natural form, for the requirements of their war machine.

While it is true that the British and their friends control the great bulk of the world's supply of oil as it comes from the ground, it is imperative that sources of supply within the Empire be developed and conserved to the utmost degree with the thought in mind that every gallon that can be conserved may play its part in the final and decisive battles of this conflict.

A Costly Process

A recent despatch from Washington referred to the success of experiments which have been undertaken by the U.S. federal bureau of mines to convert coal into gasoline and as a result it was stated that there is sufficient gasoline from this source to supply the nation's needs for 3,000 years, but, from experience in Germany and England, it has been demonstrated that the hydrogenation process of extracting gasoline from coal is considerably greater than through the use of crude petroleum.

As is well known there are enormous supplies of coal in the ground in Western Canada, particularly in Alberta and Saskatchewan, from which undoubtedly huge quantities of gasoline could be extracted, at a price. But to secure motor fuel for either war purposes or commercial use from this source, would not only entail considerable delay in setting up plants and producing machinery to handle the process but would entail such expense as to constitute an economic waste, as long as crude petroleum can be drawn from beneath the earth's crust.

Because of this and because of the increasingly important role which gasoline must play in the drive to victory, as well as the possibility of some of the British sources of supply falling into Nazi hands before the tide turns, the importance of conservation of all Empire sources of gasoline, in Western Canada, or elsewhere can scarcely be stressed too much.

Stop The Waste

When this fact is realized it seems an anomaly that G. R. Cottrill, the Dominion oil controller should have to find it necessary to issue a public warning that waste of gas, which is used in the Turner Valley fields of Alberta to lift the crude, must be stopped. The warning was inspired by the fact that the destruction of natural gas in the field by allowing it to burn in the air, is not only reducing the cheap power necessary to drive the crude oil to the surface, but, as he pointed out, "Not only is energy being wasted but the gas burned contains gasoline."

The reason which makes the stoppage of this waste highly necessary also makes it essential that existing fields of crude petroleum be developed to their maximum capacity and potential new fields explored.

Despite a rapid increase in production in the Turner Valley field of Alberta in the past few years, production is not sufficient to meet the consumptive demand of Western Canada. During 1940 Western Canada produced 8,184,862 barrels of crude oil and a recent survey showed that western provinces alone consumed 10,934,896 barrels, or nearly three million barrels more than were required for the home market, without taking into consideration potential war requirements farther afield.

This means, in effect, that last year American dollars had to be purchased to supply three million barrels of gasoline for Western Canadian consumption, entailing not only the loss of the rate of exchange as between the Canadian and American dollar but also dissipation of Canadian exchange which is needed in other directions for the war effort.

As long as this situation exists, with conservation of oil and Canadian exchange paramount requisites in our war economy, governmental control is not only advisable but it is imperative.

The Dairy Products Board has ordered that no shipments of cheese in quantities greater than 50 pounds must be made from Eastern to Western Canada. This order was published in the Canada Gazette, April 10, 1941, and reads as follows:

"That no persons shall ship cheddar cheese (process cheese excluded) in quantities greater than 50 pounds from the provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island to the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia, without authorization from the Dairy Products Board."

Applications for interprovincial cheese shipment must be made on forms which may be obtained from the Dairy Products Board, Ottawa, and must be submitted in triplicate for approval, unless otherwise arranged with the Board.

Prayed For Enemies

Missionary Tells Of Service Led By China's Christian General
A Canadian missionary was invited to dine with the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek. After dinner, following an air raid; the guest was requested to remain and join them in their evening devotions. The Generalissimo read from the Scriptures and the three joined in prayer. This Canadian guest, writing of the Generalissimo's prayer, said, "I never expect to hear such a prayer again in all my life. He began with a simple expression of thanks for their personal safety. Then he added thanks for the courage of the nation under fire. Then he prayed for strength for the men in the field and along the firing lines; he prayed for strength for himself. But the most amazing thing in his prayer was a plea that God would help him and help China not to hate the Japanese people. He prayed for the Japanese Christians, and all the suffering multitudes of Japan whose impoverishment was making the war on China possible. He prayed for the people who are bombed, for forgiveness for those who dropped the bombs."

Industry Disappearing

In Canada, as in the United States, horseshoeing is gradually disappearing as a rural industry. National registration figures just released at Ottawa show that 12,498 men claimed blacksmithing as their occupation. This was one of the very few trades in which not a single woman was registered.

The time required to see and realize a danger signal and begin to press on the automobile brake is about one-fifth of a second.

Working Underground

Resistance To Nazis In Occupied Countries Is Rapidly Growing
Reports of unrest in Rumania give point to stories of widespread dissatisfaction with the Nazi conquerors in the occupied countries of Europe, a dissatisfaction which, although forced to work underground at present, is an ever-present and growing threat to the German hegemony over Europe.

Current History, reporting that travellers returning to the United States from the war zone bring confirmation of persistent rumors of this underground warfare against the Nazis, says that, "in Norway and Holland especially, active resistance to the New Order is causing the Gestapo concern."

"In the 18th century," continues Current History, "when the Spaniards overran the Low Countries, the stubborn Netherlands formed a secret society named The Beggars to make life unendurable for their new masters. Last summer, the society of The Beggars—for 400 years extinct—was revived by daring students from the Universities of Delft and Leiden. The tactics of the 20th century Beggars were those of modern underground warfare: sabotage, secret propaganda broadcasts, signalling the position of military objectives to enemy (British) planes, the assisting of agents. Their more colorful activities ranged from sniping from housetops and knifings in the dark to the poisoning of food and drink."

"Recently the Germans arrested 37 members of The Beggars, sent 18 before the firing squad and sentenced 19 to long prison terms, hoping thus to have crushed the society. From sabotage and signalling knifings and poisonings continued. The mysterious leader of The Beggars, a certain 'Colonel Verdun', rumored to be a 43-year-old ex-army officer, remained at large and active."

"Norway resistance to the Nazi conquerors and their Norwegian traitor friends is far more widespread. Sabotage is common. Daily demonstrations are organized against the regime of the Norwegian Nazi, Major Quisling, and his aides have frequently been attacked and beaten in out-of-the-way streets. Broadcasts from London and the United States have a considerable following in Norway, in spite of the harsh prison sentence that awaits anyone found guilty of listening."

Canadian Red Cross

Gives Immediate Assistance To Victims Of London's Worst Air Raid

Stunned victims of London's worst air raid received large quantities of food, clothing and blankets from the Canadian Red Cross immediately after the Nazi blitz against the city's overseas commissioner, C. A. Scott, cabled Canadian headquarters: "One thousand civilians made homeless in a single borough found Canadian supplies ready for them as they emerged shocked and terrified from shelters and discovered the smoking ruins of their homes."

In the early hours of the morning officials called on the Canadian Red Cross for immediate assistance. Major Scott said in his cable, and within ten minutes clothing for men, women and children plus 1,500 blankets, were loaded into lorries and speeded into the disaster areas. The food included soups, stews, hash, cheese and jam. All other London boroughs affected by the raid also received Canadian assistance, the commissioner revealed.

"Thousands of parcels of food and clothing had been previously packed in preparation of such a blitz," he cabled.

Elsewhere in England affected areas speedily received supplies from the Canadian society and some eight thousand garments were distributed through the Women's Voluntary Services to suffering victims, Major Scott declared.

At a telephone switchboard in London stands Volunteer Pamela Irving of the Auxiliary Territorial Service. One of the many girls in khaki to bear a distinguished name, she joined up at the outbreak of war. And in case there is any doubt as to who made that name famous, it need only be said that she is the great-granddaughter of the actor, Sir Henry Irving.

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

—BY—

Eleanor Atterbury Colton

CHAPTER V.

Fingers of hot desert sunshine had already begun to poke into Devona's cool bedroom when she awakened next morning. In her first sleepy confusion she couldn't remember where she was. Then, with a rush, it all came back—this lovely room, this whole beautiful house, her mother—Dale!

Then she opened her eyes wide, sat up. Or was it behind her? Gradually yesterday's sense of insecurity wound smoothly through her thoughts. She mustn't stay here, they said. Yet—

She shrugged fear aside, slipped out of bed. It was too glorious a morning to be afraid of anything. Shrugging out of her wobbly sleep-gown, Devona found the blue bathing suit—new last time that she and Dad had spent a lovely lazy holiday at Naples. Flinging a wide beach cape over one arm, she slipped out into the silent, deserted hallway.

At the foot of the stairs a steady sound stopped her. Footsteps. Some one else awake early this gorgeous morning! She waited, listening to silence for a moment. Then, slowly, silently a side door opened. A man stepped softly into the hall, closed the door noiselessly behind him.

His gray hat was pulled close over his eyes, but he turned now. She could see his face. Slanting eyes in a yellow face. Wong! She felt her heart beat again. Only Wong! Smiling at her own fright, she watched him slip across the main hall, down the corridor to the servants' quarters.

By why—the question pursued her—at 6 in the morning, when all the house was taking a well-earned rest, was Wong abroad?

Then, with a shrug, she dismissed the problem. After all, what her mother's servants did was certainly none of her affair.

The first plunge into clear, green-blue water took her breath away. Then gave it back as she struck out smoothly, steadily. She loved swimming. It had been one of the few sports Dad approved. Dipping under water, she swam the length of the pool, then hoisted herself gracefully on to the tiled edge.

"Hello. What gets you out so early?" Dale's voice just behind her. Startled, she smiled up at him. "Oh—lovely morning, lovely pool."

"And a lovely girl, if I may say so." His blue eyes teased.

"Thank you, sir." She pulled off her cap, ran her fingers through the tangle of dark curls until she could control the thrill that chased through her. When she did look up she saw he was dressed in business gray, that he carried a bulging briefcase. "Are you—leaving?"

"Yes. No rest for the wicked. I've a case in court tomorrow. I've got to do some ground work on it."

"Oh, I'm sorry," and some of the glory went out of the morning.

"So am I. I'd like nothing better than to race you—two pool's lengths."

"I'd beat you," she challenged.

"Not if I had to drown you first!"

Suppose we postpone it until next

"Through high school youngsters. These runners plant a persuasive chap where the kids hang out and before you know it you've got a bunch of marijuana-smoking boys making trouble and raising hell."

"But—Isn't it dangerous," Devona persisted earnestly. "There must be plenty of money to fight a drive like yours. The men who are getting rich off this racket will surely resent what you're doing."

Dale laughed abruptly. "Resent is

She swam the length of the pool twice, then climbed gracefully onto the tiled edge. "Hello. What gets you out so early?" came Dale's voice over her shoulder week-end, same time, same place? You on?"

"I'm on."

"Good. You're practically beaten now," and gave her his hand as she stepped from the tiled pool's edge to the green lawn.

"What's your case about?" she asked just to give herself time to put a checkrein on her own wild hopes. She was not making a very auspicious beginning on this plan of hers to prove she was adult when Dale's first flippant compliment turned her face into a sunset sky!

The blue eyes went grave. "Dope running, is usual. This one in itself isn't so important. But it's paving the way for a big catch."

"You mean—"

"I mean we've got a tricky problem on our hands. It's going to take some time and some good luck to solve it." He propped the heavy brief case against a lawn chair while he lit a cigarette. "We thought we had this thing scotched a year ago. Now there's a new leak somewhere."

"How do you know?"

hardly the word for it. They winged the boss the last time we raided."

"Shot him!"

"Sure. Just like in the movies. Only difference was we didn't catch the guy that did it." He hoisted the heavy case into the coupe and opened the door.

MIDDLE-AGE WOMEN

HEED THIS ADVICE!!

Thousands of women possessing this "Young Line" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—famous for over 60 years in relieving female functional troubles. Try it!

"Oh, Dale, you must be careful."

Her imagination leaped ahead tortuously. "What if—"

Dale looked down at her a long moment. "What if—what?"

"I mean—maybe next time, they'll get you."

"Maybe." He grinned. "Would you care?"

Devona's glance went down before the teasing challenge in his. "Certainly. It seems ridiculous to take chances."

"Don't worry. I don't. I'm supposed to solve this problem. Not make another by letting them use me for a target!" He climbed into the car, slammed the door. "That's why I have friends like Jose Macias. He keeps me posted on—well, lots of things."

"I see." Devona smiled, remembered, not without apprehension, the dark violence in Macias' handsome black eyes.

"Be careful, won't you." She tried to hide real concern behind a jaunty little smile. "I need you—for moral support, you know."

"Look here." His eyes went grave again. "Don't let any one get you down, will you?"

"Why do you say that?"

"They could hurt you without half trying. You see, you're—well, different. They'll probably hate you for it at first."

"Hate me! But why?"

"Because you're beautiful and young—and untarnished."

"But—I don't understand."

He laughed then. A short, sharp little sound. "Of course, you don't. And I'm probably being an old aunt about the whole business. Just don't worry. I'll see you next week-end."

Devona nodded. "Good-bye now."

"Bye."

She watched the blue car turn out of the cool shadowy cavern the house built around the drive, out into the white highway beyond. At the corner he waved once, then disappeared.

Slowly she turned back toward the house. As she did, she saw a white coat disappear behind a clump of blazing poinsettia blossoms. A moment later Wong slipped through a side door into the house.

Wong again! Devona shuddered. Always tip-toeing around, turning up at the oddest moments. Had he, she wondered as she went on into the house, been eavesdropping behind that bush all the time? Asiatias were a curious race. But surely Wong must have seen casual flirtations before now!

She dressed quickly—a simple, yellow linen with a trail of brown buttons from throat to hem. She'd begin learning to-day. She'd make Mrs. Vadne proud to be her mother. She had to! A little snog snagged in her throat. She had to—

Then a tap at her door, Wong's voice just outside, Telephone for Miss Raebourne."

"Thank you, Wong."

Fuzzled, Devona followed him down the corridor to the little phone booth tucked behind an ornamental wrought iron gate. Who could be calling her?

"Hello?"

"Devona?"—an already familiar voice.

"Oh!" Her own voice faltered to a whisper.

"Hello. Are you there?"

"Yes. Yes, Dale. I'm here."

"I just wanted to ask you not to mention the name of the person I was talking to you about just before I left." The words came crisp and clear across the wire.

"You mean—Mr.—" She caught back the name just in time. "Oh, I won't."

"It's rather important things like that don't get around. I should have warned you. Not that I think there's any danger out there. Still, it's better to be on the safe side."

"Of course. And to be careful."

"Right. See you later. Bye."

"Bye."

Mechanically she replaced the receiver, opened the door to the little booth. It must be strange, nerve-racking business—this work of Dale's. To be so careful, so constantly on guard.

Thoughtfully, she went back to her room. As she closed the door behind her, a short, black-haired figure in a white servant's jacket, slipped out of a hall closet, disappeared away.

noiselessly down the servant's stair— (To Be Continued.)

But Paderewski Answers Hoover's Idea To Feed Europe

An American correspondent reports that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt met Paderewski in Florida a few days ago and discussed with him the future of Poland. Poland is suffering a great deal more than any part of France. Germany is carrying out systematically almost the greatest crime in history, that of deliberately trying to destroy the entire Polish race by a process of starvation, shooting of the men and other means.

"Do you think," Mrs. Roosevelt asked, "we should send food to Poland?" "It is difficult to make a decision concerning my countrymen," Paderewski replied, and then after meditation, he added: "But nothing should be done to disturb the British blockade."

Paderewski has given the answer to Mr. Hoover's well-meaning but misguided plans to feed the peoples who are under Hitler's rule, and therefore, are his responsibility.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Invention By Blind Man

Gadget Operated By Electricity Tells Denomination Of Bills

A news item from Ottawa says they will have to rewrite that old phrase about "stealing money from a blind man" if the idea of 27-year-old George LaFleur of suburban Overbrook is put into general practice.

LaFleur, himself blind, has invented an automatically-controlled device that can be plugged into any electric light socket and which enables the operator to tell by means of electrical impulses the denomination of any bills placed in the machine.

A little black box about 10 inches square and five inches deep, the device is an adaptation of the photo-electric cell. It was produced by LaFleur in collaboration with John H. Hewson of Ottawa, expert on electrical sound devices.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

GOOD EVER OBTAINABLE

Because you lack a noble and successful past, is no real reason why you should lack a noble and successful future.—Thomas Dreier.

The law of nature is, Do the thing, and you shall have the power; but they who do not the thing have not the power.—Emerson.

Faith in divine Love supplies the ever-present help and now, and gives the power to "act in the living present."—Mary Baker Eddy.

Look upon very day as the whole of life, not merely as a section; and enjoy and improve the present without wishing, through haste, to rush on to another.—Richer.

The present is never our object; the past and the present we use as means; the future only is our end. Thus we never live, we only hope to live.—Pascal.

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow or turning.—New Testament: James 1: 17.

Carried Strange Address

But British Post Office Delivered Letter To Proper Person

A letter from New York addressed to "Miss Jane Moore, Southeast coast of England, whose home is nearest enemy—a bit of land that juts out into the sea, England," was delivered to Miss Joan Moore, 35-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Moore of Capel, near Folkestone.

A picture of Miss Moore feeding chickens in her garden near a crashed German airplane was reproduced in a New York newspaper. Miss Frances Simmonds of New York said it and wrote a letter ending, "Keep your chin up, fingers crossed."

The picture caption didn't give Miss Moore's address. But the post office eventually traced her from the address on Miss Simmonds' letter.

Nazis Confiscate Children's Food

German authorities in Warsaw have confiscated (a) herrings, sausages and meats prepared for feeding children in the holidays, and (b) 15,000 pounds of lard, sausages and meat in the central stock-house of the Metropolitan Committee of Social Assistance. The latter food had been offered as gifts for the asylums supported by the Metropolitan Committee serving the poorest class of the people.

Simple and Inexpensive to Make

A hooked rug gives your home such a warm, intimate air! And you can hook this charming design easily.

Use any material you have on hand (though woolen is best) and for colors—the more the merrier! Lovely together are rose, green, black, beige, orchid.

How to begin? On a large piece of burlap draw the shape of the rug, 23 by 37 inches. Then draw a 1-inch border and rule off 15 boxes, each 7 inches square. The floral and geometric designs you draw from patterns.

Now, after sewing carpet binding round your rug and tacking to a wood frame, you can hook.

With one hand, hold a strip of fabric (but 1/2 inch wide) under the rug. With the other hand thrust the hook through the burlap and pull up the strip, leaving a loop 1/2 inch high on top of the burlap. Carefully following your color scheme, hook the same way until the rug is finished.

Our 32-page booklet gives exact instructions and patterns for making a hooked rug. Also tells how to make other lovely hooked styles, as well as woven, braided, knitted, tufted and crocheted rugs.

Used In Finland

Cattle Fodder Is Made From Ordinary Pine Wood Pulp

A new cellulose cattle fodder has been put on the open market in Finland. Called "pine oats" it is made from ordinary pine wood pulp and is similar in nutritive value to oats. Due to the poor harvest last year and the import difficulties the Finns have turned to this new artificial feed for their stock. It is a maintenance diet only being mixed with natural feeds for best results.

Modern farm machinery is used on only a few farms in Manchuria.

Luxurious Informality On Great Lakes Cruises

One of Canada's most delightful holiday attractions is a Canadian Pacific Great Lakes Steamship cruise, an inland sea voyage from Port McNicoll through Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Lake Superior to Port William.

It is an ocean voyage in miniature — the word "miniature" being used in a comparative sense only, because the trip is 512 miles one way, the ship is completely out of sight of land at times and shipboard life and all entertainment are patterned on ocean-cruise style.

Canadians and Americans in increasing numbers have found joy in Great Lakes cruises in recent years, spending their entire vacations on cruises or using the lake route as a link in a longer trip. Sailing and arrival times of the ships are planned to coincide with train times on the Canadian Pacific's transcontinental line. Or, reduced rates for carrying automobiles make the lake cruise a delightful interlude in a long motor tour.

The regular passenger ships, the Kewatin and the Assiniboia, fine Clyde-built steamships with a gross tonnage of 3,880 and speed of 15 knots, have been outfitted especially for cruise service. They make 27 westbound and 27 eastbound trips in the summer months, westbound sailings being on Saturdays and Wednesdays from Port McNicoll and eastbound sailings being on Saturdays and Tuesdays from Port William and Port Arthur. The round trip takes four days and a night. Half the trip, a return cruise between either terminal and the Soo, affords a pleasant two-day holiday. Special boat trains are operated between Toronto and Port McNicoll.

Another carefree cruise of more than 1,000 miles in five days can be made on the S.S. Manitoba, 2,616-ton steel-constructed ship. The cruise is from Owen Sound to Port William and return, with calls at several interesting ports. The route is via the North Inside Channel of Manitoulin Island.

All three ships are equipped and staffed to make cruising easy and enjoyable. The cruise is of a high standard, social entertainment includes dancing, moonlight parties and afternoon teas and ship sports include shuffle-board, deck quoits and other popular pastimes. Informality and luxury are found on every hand.

BRITISH WESTERN DESERT VICTORY

In their victorious Western Desert advance from Egypt into Libya the British Forces captured nearly 40,000 prisoners of whom about 25,000 were Italian officers and other ranks.

SOLDIERS' OVERSEAS MAIL GIVEN GOOD ATTENTION

OTTAWA, March 8.—When letters arrive late from our forces overseas there are many reasons quite beyond the control of the Postal Service to account for the delay. Today Hon. William P. Mulock, K.C., M.P., Postmaster General, mentioned a few of these causes as reported to him by officers of the Canadian Postal Corporation.

Letters from our forces in the United Kingdom, which are carried postage free, if mailed at a Field Post Office, receive the same skilled handling as those posted at a Canadian Post Office, and every effort is made to expedite delivery.

These mails from Great Britain are sorted daily as received at the Canadian Postal Headquarters, overseas and are made up in separations, every precaution being taken to see they reach their Canadian addressees without delay.

After being "logged up" at the Canadian Postal Headquarters in Great Britain, these mails are transferred to the British Post Office for transportation to the port of shipment. Perhaps the mails at this point may not always receive the same speedy handling as in peace time for it must be remembered that a very large percentage of the personnel of the British Postal Service are now in various branches of the armed forces, and have been replaced by inexperienced help. During the Christmas season in England, for example, the services of several thousand soldiers were loaned to the Post Office to help despatch millions of cards and parcels.

While their husbands are serving with Britain's armed forces the wives of British Post Office employees, although they have never done the work before, have come forward in thousands to fill their men's places, and help sort letters and parcels. Some 50,000 women in England also helped deliver the mails during the Christmas rush.

Air Raids

Delays in expediting the mail in the Old Country have been occasioned by enemy air raids, but despite alarms postal personnel often disregard the imminent danger signal, and carry on under "bitter" conditions so that the mail can get through.

In one recent case where 1,300 bags of letters from our Canadian forces were despatched to a British port of shipment, they were loaded on the steamer which left port. Shortly after, it was discovered that its protective equipment was not functioning properly and as the ship would have to pass through a mine-field it was considered advisable to return for repairs first. These repairs took one week.

The British General Post Office was preparing to transfer the mails to another ship, when the vessel cut short her stay and put to sea. Later it was found necessary to enter an Irish port for further repairs. As there was no opportunity of removing the mails at that point and putting them aboard another steamer, they had to remain on board, and were carried to Canada after the repairs had been effected.

In another case, the mails for Canada were on board a steamer when the port was bombed by enemy aircraft. The ship was damaged to some extent which prevented it sailing as scheduled, and by the time the mails had been removed from this vessel, her sailings had been missed. These mails, while undamaged, were appreciably delayed in reaching Canada. Thus it will be seen that while war conditions make for unavoidable delay the Postal Service in effecting delivery shows that it is surmounting such obstacles.

FIRST GROUP OF "FOUR-MONTH MEN" TO BE RETAINED FOR HOME DEFENCE

Ottawa
Graduates of the first group of 4,840 twenty-one-year-olds called under the National Resources Mobilization Act for a 4 month training period will be kept in the Army indefinitely for defence work in Canada, Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, said at the weekend.

When they have completed their training in July they will go on duty for defence at the Pacific or in the Maritimes, and on internal security and guard duty in the interior to relieve men now performing this work, who have signed up for overseas.

Where possible these young soldiers will serve in the localities from which they came. Whether those called for the second camp will be likewise assigned to home defence on completion of their training in August will depend on developments, the Minister stated.

Many of those now in training under the plan have signed up for active service in the defence forces. The Minister reported, stating that where there is a surplus of manpower in certain of these units these men will be transferred to arms of the service where they are most needed.

A total of 9,830 young men called for the four month training period are now in training. Of these 8,840 will finish their course in July, and 4,990 in August. In the second draft, 468 of the 5,458 reporting failed to pass the medical examination at the training centres.
